Theodore Mayo, an enthusiastic member of the Rev. F. T. Crane's squad of boy scouts, was able to put into practice some of the teachings that the boys receive from Mr. Crane when he rescued Donald Blake, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Blake, from drowning Monday afternoon. The little boy was fishing at the Fallsides Park bridge when he fell into the river, about four feet deep. Harrison Goodell, a little older, who was with him, was making ineffectual attempts to get him out of the water, but he was going down the second time when young Mayo plunged in after him. Applying the lessons of resuscitating the drowning, taught him by Mr. Crane, he was able to free the little fellow's lungs of water, after which he carried him home. Mayo who is not yet 15, and who has completed his second year in the high school, is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mayo.
